Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County: http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/www_bc_cal.php

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

An upper level trough will move over northwest California and remain in place for the next week. Showers and isolated thunderstorms will be possible over interior northwest California each afternoon and evening. Some showers may impact coastal areas mid to late week.

Medford Weather:

An upper low approaching from the Pacific will bring more widespread showers to west side areas today with isolated thunderstorms forecast from the Cascades to the east side. Today will be much cooler with many inland area high temperatures 15 to 20 degrees lower. Moderate to heavy showers are expected throughout the forecast area on Tuesday with snow levels around 5000 feet. Showers are expected to gradually decrease Tuesday night as the upper low weakens and moves north.

Reno Weather:

Low pressure off the Pacific Northwest coast will drop into Northern California and southern Oregon on Tuesday. The low will bring cooler temperatures and gusty winds, along with chances for showers and thunderstorms north of Interstate 80. Another system will move into California and Nevada late Thursday into the weekend bringing the chance for more showers and thunderstorms.

San Francisco Weather:

Partly to mostly cloudy with near to below normal temperatures today though Wednesday across the Bay Area. By Thursday, a front will approach with a chance of some light rainfall across the region that could linger into Friday. Dry weather likely returns next weekend but the pattern remains cool with an upper trough persisting along the West Coast.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

Cooler and more unsettled conditions expected this week across the interior of Northern California as several weather systems affect the region.

Hanford Weather:

Dry weather and warmer temperatures forecast through today as a ridge of high pressure remains in central California. Afterward, a trough of low pressure will move over Northern California and is expected to begin a cooling trend for the next few days. Another low pressure system will bring a chance of precipitation to the region by late in the week.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

A cooling trend and an increase in marine layer cloud coverage are expected early this week as a trough of low pressure develops. A stronger low pressure system may bring a chance of rain for late in the week. Cool weather will likely continue into next weekend.

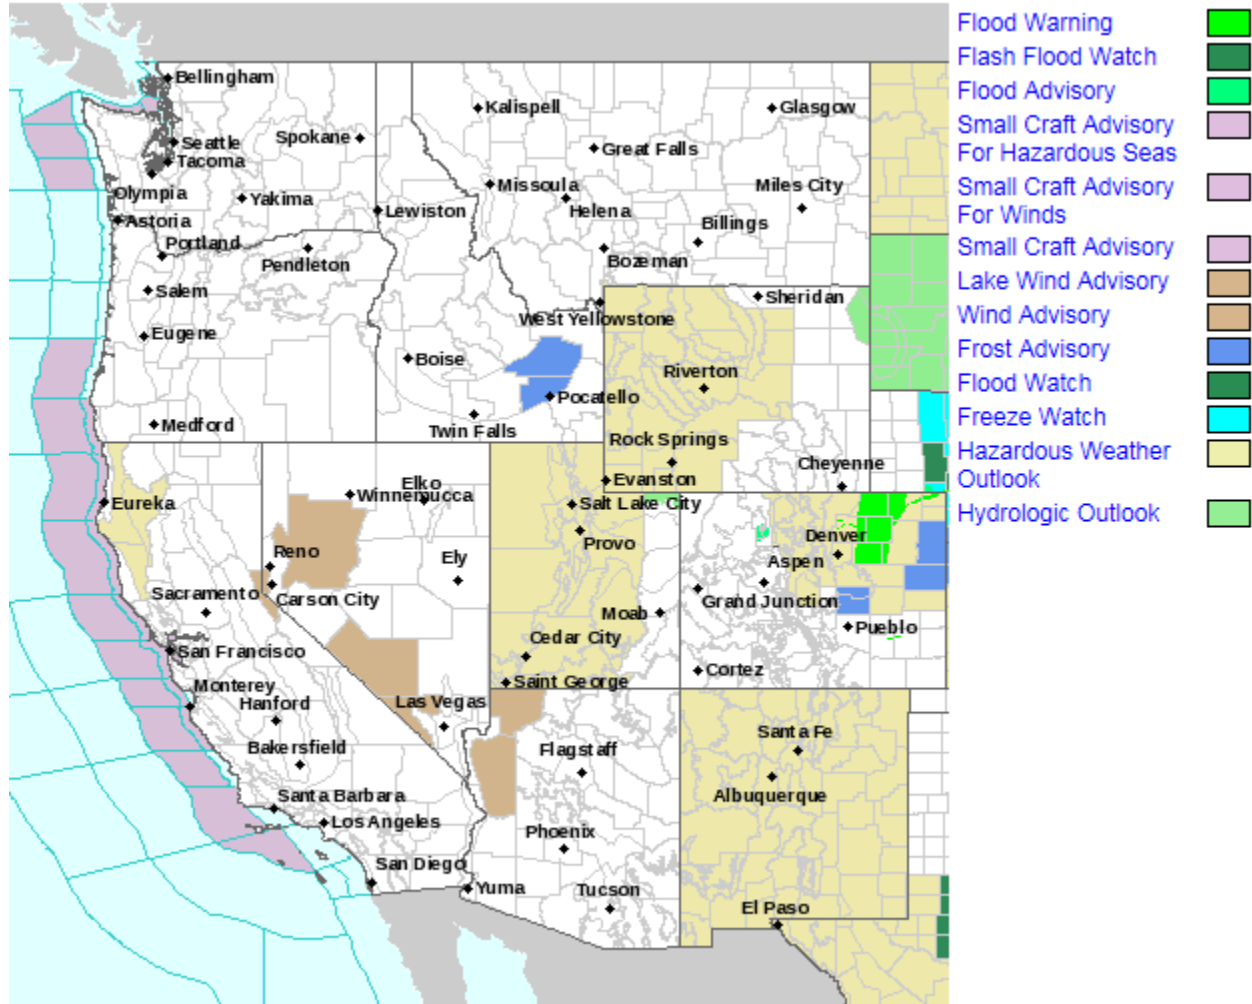

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

Fair and seasonal weather is expected the next few days with low clouds and fog near the coast each night and morning. Low pressure to our north will help deepen the marine layer and extend the low clouds farther inland each night. A storm is possible by Friday with gusty winds and showers, followed by fair weather over the weekend.

Southeast California Weather:

Weak high pressure will bring near normal temperatures with plenty of sunshine through Thursday across the Desert Southwest. Another unseasonably cool low pressure system will affect the region late Thursday through Saturday ushering in much cooler temperatures, breezy conditions, and chances for rain.
